Andrew Schulz of Reardan Retires as Washington FFA State President

Pullman, WA; Leading with a can-do attitude, Andrew Schulz prepares to hang up his blue jacket for the final time.

Schulz has been a member of the National FFA Organization for the last six years. Originally, Schulz decided to join FFA because of the friendships and competition that comes from the organization. However, it was the life-lessons learned and confidence gained that made him want to stay. Schulz competed in the Agricultural Issues Leadership Development Events (LDE) Parliamentary Procedure LDE, Prepared Public Speaking LDE, Extemporaneous Speaking LDE, Conduct of Chapters LDE, Livestock Evaluation Career Development Event (CDE), Creed Speaking LDE, and the Potato Evaluation CDE. He said his favorite part of FFA was the interactions he got to have wherever he went.

As Schulz prepared to retire, his final message encouraged members to make the most of the things that they can control while recognizing what they can't. He also encouraged members to surround themselves with others who will amplify them.

During his year of service, Schulz became recognized as a leader.

Washington FFA State Advisor Tamera Whitcomb said, "He is the first person to think of others and what he can do to help the association. He also is a person who is very kind and supportive of others."

Andrew, thank you for being dedicated to leaving the association better than you found it. We appreciate your kindness, servant-leadership mentality, and problem solving ability. Congratulations on a year well served.

The Washington FFA Association extends our heartfelt thanks and well wishes to Schulz as he walks into this next season.

Congratulations Andrew Schulz!
